My RESIDENCE

Picturing your dream home or your place of sanctuary over the last 12 months has probably been of interest to us all. Our home has had to adapt to the new lifestyle, with the kitchen becoming the new office, or the living room turned classroom, as well as a playground and the social hub for the family, all whilst trying to relax – spending more time in our home; light, space, security, and warmth are high on the agenda.

Beautiful and secure windows and doors can transform your home: a new garden room? An airy kitchen or just a relaxing bedroom? The choice is yours.

Whether you're changing from timber, aluminium or updating PVCu - The Residence Collection should be your choice for superior performance, beautiful aesthetics and minimal maintenance.

In this issue, we give you the low down on U-values and how they benefit you and your home. Top tips for conservatories and how they can add extra living space and functionality, as well as showcasing some of our favourite colours and case studies.

Now here is the hard part – grab a cuppa, pop your feet up and indulge yourself in inspiration

Enjoy your Residence journey!

The U-Value Low-down

Trying to decipher technical terms can be a bit daunting when starting your renovation journey. We've put together this article so you can get to grips on U-values and why they are an important factor into choosing the right windows and doors for your home.

What exactly is a U-Value?

U-values are used to measure the effectiveness of preventing heat loss from inside a building. The lower the u-value of a window or door means the slower the heat is able to transmit through it and so the better it performs as an insulator.

How would you measure that?

U-values are measured in watts per square metre, per degree Kelvin ( $W/m^2K$ ). For every degree of temperature difference in the air for the inside and outside of the window or door, the U-value is equivalent to how many Watts of heat are lost. For example- If the U-value is '1' for every degree of temperature difference between the inside and the outside, that will mean that one watt of heat will escape your home.

But how does this benefit me?

As the colder months and darker days draw in, the benefit of a good U-value means that less energy will be required to heat your home for longer, creating a comfortable home with low running costs.

What are the Residence Collection U-Values?

All 3 Residence Collection Systems can achieve  $1.2 W/(m^2K)$  with double glazing and our lowest is  $0.74 W/m^2K$  with triple glazing - Passivhaus standards state that U-values for windows should be below  $0.8 W/(m^2K)$ .

“Broadly speaking, the lower the U-Value the better insulation and therefore the less energy required to maintain a comfortable environment inside your home. Residence can easily achieve a 0.8 U-Value, suitable for Passive House standard using 44mm glass or 12 U-Value with double glazing.”

R7 FEATURE HOME

Pip's House

This beautiful home was given a fresh, new look with Residence 7. The homeowner opted for Painswick externally, and Chalk White matt finish internally.

The Painswick exterior really complements both the red brick work and white render, giving his home a subtle pop of colour, while the leaded glass top lights add character.

The large bay windows were finished with a smooth style plinth on each corner, creating a contemporary look flooding the rooms with plenty of natural light.

R7 in Chalk White was the ideal colour choice to match the modern interior of this home, blending in with the homeowners existing aesthetic seamlessly.

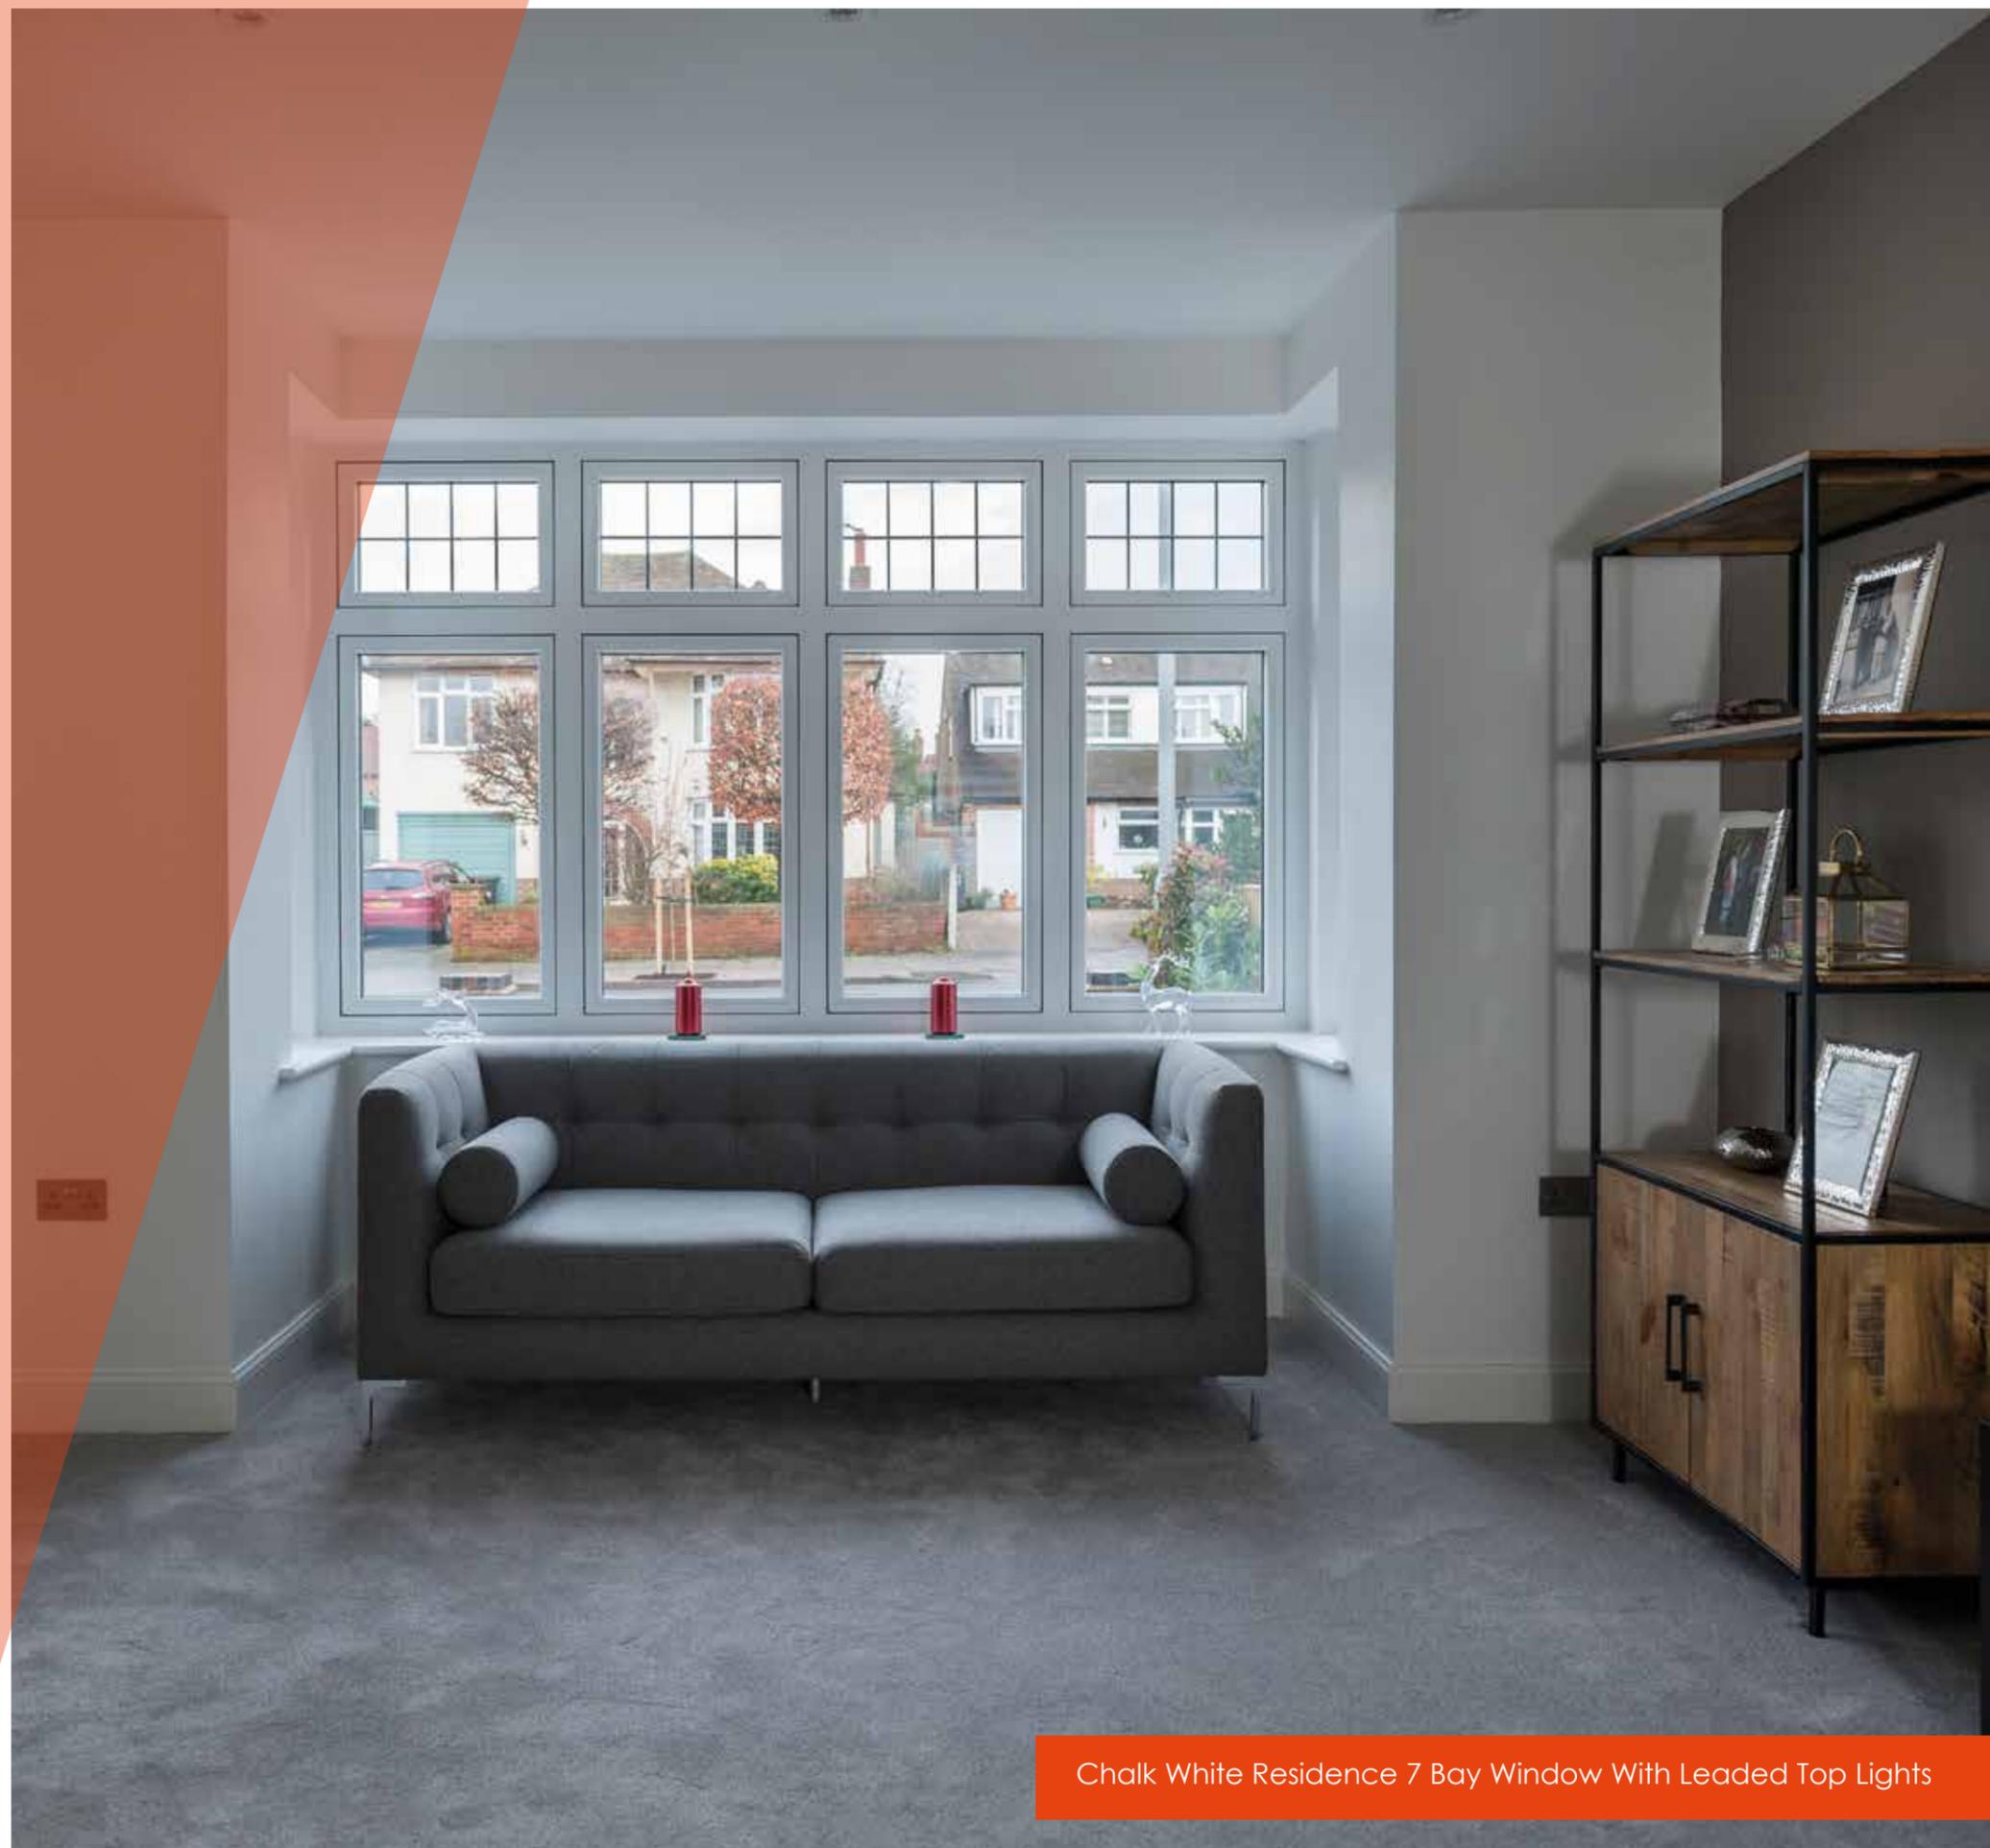

These windows were manufactured by Frametrade and installed by The Nottingham Window Company.

Questions Answered

Can I Paint My Residence Windows?

Quite simply, the answer is no, as there is no need!

It's natural to think about painting our windows as the finish has an authentic timber look. However, they are a maintenance free alternative to timber which means they will not need painting, sanding or staining, ever! Just a wipe clean with a damp cloth every now and again.

There are a wide range of colours to choose from that look just like painted timber but without the maintenance - all you need to do is wipe them with some warm water to keep them looking pristine for years to come!

The Conservatory

The traditional conservatory is an ideal way to create a beautiful living space, as well as adding extra functionality and value to your home.

Conservatories, orangeries, garden rooms, extensions - whatever you call it, a well designed and built conservatory can be used throughout the year. It's important to consider all angles and to work closely with your chosen installer to make sure all your lifestyle needs are met. Here's a few things to consider before you start your journey:

1. Design

Will your conservatory be south facing? Think about how hot or cold it may get. Do you want your roof to match your existing or with some glass to allow more light in? There's lanterns, roof lights and solid roofs to consider. What drainage solution is going to be best for you? There is a solution to suit every home and all these things need to be discussed with your installer during your survey prior to installation.

2. Primary Use

A social family might like a comfortable space to socialise with guests in, while working from home has become the new normal so a light and airy workstation will help productivity. Knowing your conservatory's main function will ensure you will make the most out of your new investment.

3. Insulation

The UK is blessed with unpredictable weather so having good quality glazing will ensure you keep the cold air out and the warm air in. It's also worth investing in some good blinds - in the summer months they'll help block out the sun to keep the space cooler and in the winter months act as valuable layer of insulation. That way you have maximum comfort all year round.

Whether you are looking for an orangery, garden room or a traditional conservatory, The Residence Collection offer bespoke spaces designed entirely with you in mind to make the most of your living spaces indoors and out, with a truly beautiful design. Ask your installer about Residence Collection windows and doors for your project.
